ABSTRACT

This study aims to find out how to shift the role of agents as financial consultants through personal selling. Through the quality of service and social interaction provided, it will provide satisfaction and build customer trust, so as to increase buying interest. The object of research is PT Prudential Life Assurance. The research uses a quantitative approach through statistical testing. The test was conducted using SEM method with the help of AMOS 26. The sampling technique used was non-probability sampling. Research respondents are 160 who are active customers. The results showed that there was an effect of Service Quality on Customer Satisfaction and Customer Trust; Social Interaction on Customer trust; and Service Quality, Customer Satisfaction and Customer Trust on Purchase Intentions. Meanwhile, Social Interaction does not completely affect Purchase Intention directly. Apart of education and mutual understanding, the closeness between agents and customers is needed so that trust can be formed and can influence Purchase Intentions.

Keywords: Service Quality, Social Interaction, Customer Trust, Customer Satisfaction, Purchase Intention.
