ABSTRACT

Innovation and improvement of the Indonesian economic system continue to develop, both in regulations and implementation. Through the aspiration to achieve the welfare state, the government thus implements various policies to put down the renewal of the national economy and develop it for prosperity. Especially with the coronavirus outbreak (Covid-19 or SARS-CoV-2) which emerged at the end of 2019. These policies are to assist the community with economic recovery. However, the corruption that occurred during this period harmed these communities. This study used a qualitative method with an empirical literature approach, made by collecting documents of government policy related to this research. The results of this research showed that preventing corruption requires more attention, not only in laws but also in morals. Evaluation and changes of legal policies in the field of corruption are appropriate steps that need to consider so that the interests of law and society can get maintained and protected. National law reforms, especially those related to corruption in business and corporate crimes, no longer only focus on the prosecution process. Prevention is a step that needs to take as the government's first attempt to ensure compliance. The prevention of this crime comes in the form of supervision and guidance equipped with various forms of sanctions and actions.

GREETINGS

GENERAL CHAIR 3rd INCLAR
Sholahuddin Al Fatih, S.H., M.H

I am Sholahuddin Al Fatih, a lecturer in Faculty of Law, University of Muhammadiyah Malang, Malang, East Java, Indonesia. I spent my time as Editor in Chief for Legality: Jurnal Ilmiah Hukum and many journals as editorial board and reviewer.

It is a humbling thing to be asked as General Chair of 3rd INCLAR, held by Faculty of Law, University of Muhammadiyah Malang and co-hosted by Universitas Surabaya, Universitas Trisakti, Universitas Negeri Gorontalo, Universitas Islam Riau, Universitas Muhammadiyah Surabaya, Universitas Muhammadiyah Sukabumi and Universitas Muhammadiyah Ponorogo with so many impactful paper and talented authors.

3rd INCLAR is an international conference that offering papers to be presented and seminars under the theme, Understanding Law Reform on Post Covid-19 Pandemic. The 3rd INCLAR is undergoing some major changes, including the method that use blended (between on-site and online) and proceeding publisher (from Atlantis Press in the previous conference to KnE). With this new change, authors can expect more enjoyable conference and fast publications times.

In all this, our goal is to continue to make INCLAR the premier conference for law lecturers and related fields. We thank to our keynote speaker, invited speaker, co-host, sponsor and all beloved presenter and participant. Suggestion and recommendation of fruitful ideas for further INCLAR, are welcome and should be directed to inclar@umm.ac.id.

Regards,
Sholahuddin Al Fatih, S.H., M.H
