Abstract

Intervention can be interpreted as interference by other countries in the internal affairs of other countries in a dictatorial manner accompanied using force or threats of force. The prohibition regarding the intervention of a country in the domestic affairs of other nations has been regulated in the Charter of the United Nations (UN Charter) as the basis of international law. The issue being discussed is whether NATO's intervention in the conflict in Libya through the Odyssey Dawn joint operation is in accordance with the 1945 UN Charter. The type of research used in this research is the normative juridical research method, namely research carried out through literature study methods based on primary and secondary legal materials. Applicable international law or legal materials deemed necessary and required such as agreements, conventions, treaties, and customs. The result was that the intervention in the Libyan conflict by the North Atlantic Treaty Operation through the joint operation Odyssey Dawn was not in accordance with the provisions in the United Nations Charter or the 1945 United Nations Charter.
